

DC Metrocentric

New Buildings, Construction, Destruction, Planning, Real Estate, and Gossip as it happens in the Nation's Capital

GroundBreaking: N Moore Street

October 18, 2010

A little rain couldn't stop the folks behind the new North Moore Street in Rosslyn from picking up a shovel last week and moving some ceremonial dirt. Of course the politicians came out in force, including Congressman Jim Moran and Arlington County Board Chair Jay Fisset, among others, which isn't surprising given the upcoming elections.

Everyone seemed very optimistic despite the gloomy rain, the CEO of Monday Properties remarked that "Rosslyn is repeatedly one of the strongest real estate markets in the country. With its fundamental location advantages within the metropolitan Washington, D.C. area and a growing tenant community, we see 1812 North Moore as a new landmark for the region." Ok we are convinced, now when does the heavy machinery actually start moving?